Headline:
Rather cold with scattered showers today.

Today:
A bright day with sunny intervals and a scattering of showers, these falling as snow on the mountains. Feeling quite cold but warmer in long sunny spells in the southwest.

Tonight:
Bright spells in the evening then clear spells overnight with a few showers. A chilly night with a touch of grass frost in places.

Thursday:
A mixture of bright spells and scattered showers. Feeling rather cold with a northeasterly breeze.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
The rather cold, bright and showery weather will continue. Showers more frequent in north and east with hill snow, best of sunshine on west coast. Overnight frosts.
